

Have read the Executive Summary with great interest. By the way the name is Roy. C. Hayter, not Chayter.

I find it interesting that you have come up with yet another definition for 'Disability'. The DRC and DfT (DPTAC) definitions are also different! It is most confusing. On top of these three definitions, there is also a social and medical definition of 'Disability'! It's a great pity that all Government Departments can't all sing from the same hymn sheet!

Does this Strategy apply to the whole of the UK?

I am sure that this Strategy paper will cause much talk by disabled people, especially with the Prime Minister's new strategy regarding incapacity benefit.

I am registered blind and have MS, so have a personal interest in all that is happening regarding any new Strategy for Disabled People.
